"Mystery is at the heart of creativity. That, and surprise." - Julia Cameron

How can one possibly enter the world of the mysterious without some imagination? Some time to ponder. Some room to explore. Curiosity.

Whoever you are, deep down, may be a complete mystery to you. You get a hint now and then and surprise yourself with new interests and ideas. Keep following the trail.

There is adventure and mystery in becoming yourself. Keep it in the dark from others if you like. Make them wonder. "I haven't seen her in over a month. She doesn't answer the phone. It's totally unlike her."

While you are on your adventures exploring new interests or working toward your dream, containment and a little intrigue can mean the difference between a life-altering experience or a return to the same expectations that kept you stuck.

No matter what happens, go for the intrigue of exploring the mysteries of yourself. You'll never regret it.
